Intelligence Everywhere

The Future of Intelligent Applications

As we rapidly move towards a more hyper-connected future, it's becoming increasingly important to think beyond mobile – while talking about building applications – in order to deliver adaptive and personalized experiences that are not limited to by device constraints. In other words, more and more is required to develop intelligent apps that can assist users in making accurate predictions and choices based on the historical and real-time data of a user.

Intelligent apps promise to further enrich customer experiences by providing businesses the opportunities to adapt to their rapidly changing needs and ways of engaging with them. Gartner predicts 21 billion “things” will be connected to the internet by 2020 and all exchanging data 24x7.

Because of this, we will also see an increasing need for businesses to respond to events as they happen. Intelligent applications could be the suitable solution.
